

SUMMER INTERNATIONAL PROGRAM

in Environmental Health Sciences

New Haven • Connecticut • USA

PROGRAM DATES: JULY 17–28, 2023

Summer International Program in Environmental Health Sciences (SIPEHS) is a short-term summer program which introduces exciting emerging topics and research tools in environmental health sciences. General introductions to Yale School of Public Health will be covered as well.

APPLY ONLINE:

<https://publichealth.yale.edu/education/special/sipehs/>

Beginning February 1, 2023

Notifications will be sent upon acceptance.

TUITION $3,000

The 2023 SIPEHS will be held virtually due to the pandemic.

AREAS OF STUDY

- Climate and energy impacts on health
- Developmental origins of human disease
- Green chemistry solutions
- Understanding and overcoming environmental health disparities
- Novel approaches to assessing environmental exposures and early biomarkers of effect
- Applications and implications in major human diseases (e.g. cancer and COVID-19)

PROGRAM DIRECTORS

Vasilis Vasiliou, Ph.D.

Yong Zhu, Ph.D.

PROGRAM ADMINISTRATORS

Damaris Faustine

Laura Wiggins